How does a Vampire atone for a mistake made centuries before? Some would say there is no way for atonement. Craven would tell them to go to Hell. He has finally found the one thing he has searched for. The Asis stone. Created millennium before it has the ability to convert energy into Blood magic therefore allowing a Vampire to live without feeding and it is the key to Cravens redemption. Aurora Riviere was born in the forest of Benevento. She had planned to live the remained her of her days with the forest she considered her kindred. A chance meeting in her woods would change all of that forever and now she has spent centuries hating the person who ruined her life and she is ready just to end her own suffering. Will Craven be able to convince Aurora to continue living long enough for him to make amends or die trying? Given that the stone is currently being held in the Kingdom by the First Lord himself his chances of obtaining it are very slim. But, you would be surprised the lengths a benevolent being will go to help those that help themselves. Contains bonus novella Ange Noir plus, an excerpt of The Necromancers Wife.
